

NEW YORKISM.

From Our Own Correspondent. NEW YORK, Nov. 13, 1896. The Bronze Banquet Again. I must go down to the bronze banquet to say that no sooner was the bronze banquet over on Wednesday, and the lemonade and pound-cake all eaten, than he ran down to the reading-room of the Astor House, improvised the form of a very neat note of invitation, had a certain number of quantities printed, and immediately had them distributed among the leading men of the various newspaper offices. The note politely states that the arrangements for the bronze banquet having been a disappointment to him, he begs leave to express his regret, and to request the pleasure of the reader's company to a dinner to be given by him on Tuesday evening, November 16, at the Astor House. I think I see the rosy and obsequious smile that over spreads the countenance of every newspaper man whom one of these invitations reaches. Captain De Groot's peace is made with the press. He may be suffered to breathe again.

Central Park. All sorts of good things are being perpetrated at Central Park. Among these are the establishment of chairs for invalids. This, I believe, is an old-fashioned thing that has long been out of use and has just come in again. These comfortable chairs are distributed by the half-dozen to the principal gates, and can be hired by the hour at a moderate price. Another new fashion is the harnessing of trained goats for the detection of the juveniles, and the hiring of them out for so much an hour. This has only been in operation for a few days, but is found to work extremely well. All the healthy, handsome children who visit the Park, and who can raise their necessary stamps, may be seen occupying the elegant little carriages used in these excursions, and whipping the goats along, uttering regular losses of the solemn individuals who are taking their severe "constitutional" along the gravelled pathways. A tiger's cave is also in process of building, and a great effort is being made to induce the bears to run the century race. Contributions have hitherto come in rather slowly, but there is some prospect of the museum's this year presenting a very creditable appearance.

Mr. Stewart's Cemetery. It is well known that Mr. A. T. Stewart, in view of his advanced age and the religious habits which his plan for carrying his business has brought into him, has for some months had his mind fixed upon thoughts of the tomb. It is to this end, perhaps, that he has lately purchased several acres of land on the South Hempstead Turnpike, about one mile southeast of Hempstead, of which he proposes to make a cemetery. It is suspected by those who know him best that the means of his connection with his up-town store, and that he will buy cheaper than they could possibly get it done elsewhere all his old clerks who have not been pensioned off, and who consequently die in the harness. Rather a good idea, is it not? He likewise proposes to beautify and adorn the grounds, so that they may equal any cemetery on Long Island.

A Thief a Policeman. A man who is discovered to have been a notorious thief has just resigned his position as a patrolman. His name is William M. Costello, and he has been in the police force for some time. He has been in the police force for some time, and he has been in the police force for some time. He has been in the police force for some time, and he has been in the police force for some time.

Fi-k's Brass Band. Mr. James F. K. Jr., has already completed arrangements by which a brass band—the famous one which plays exclusively for the king of the Belgians—is to give a short series of concerts in this country. The concerts will probably be given at the Grand Opera House, and will not cover more than a few weeks altogether. They will take place in the Grand Opera House, and will not cover more than a few weeks altogether.

The New Central Iowa Railroad. To the people of Iowa the Central Iowa Railroad is still an terra incognita. We hear about fabulous stories of the unparalleled mineral and agricultural wealth of the immense tract of country comprised in what is called the Mississippi valley, but the general ideas about the actual development of this magnificent region are extremely vague.

Iowa, for example, has an area greater than that of Pennsylvania or New York. More than 35,000,000 acres lie within her boundaries. Her population has grown from 162,000 in 1850 to 1,100,000 in 1890. Her production of wheat, corn, and oats has increased from 11,000,000 bushels in 1850 to 87,000,000 in 1890. And yet but one-ninth of her area (4,317,841 acres out of a total of 35,288,800) has been put under cultivation. This has not been for any natural lack in capacity, for Iowa has so little timber and a so uniformly undulating surface that it is estimated that not one acre in ten is waste land. The soil is a rich, deep mold, of a fertility unsurpassed in the world. What small stimulate further population and an even more rapid increase of production than has already distinguished the Hawkeye State? The answer is found in the history of every Western State where the bulk of the population is agricultural, and farming has not reached the point where it comes to farmers of New England or the Middle States.

Give to the rolling prairies of Iowa, as yet untilled, ready access by competing routes to rival markets, and its fifty-five thousand square miles will feed half the world. Five east and west lines, in construction or completed, carry her freights to Chicago; there is not a north and south line in the State to give the producer and the consumer the benefit of a competing market. The way is about to be supplied by the building of the "Central Railroad of Iowa," from the southern to the northern boundary, two hundred and forty miles in length, passing through a tier of counties which have a population of more than 200,000, and which are among the richest in all that rich State, and forming, in connection with the North Missouri road from St. Louis, and the Milwaukee and St. Paul from the Chicago city, a completed and successful operation, a through line between those two large and growing commercial Western centers, about 150 miles shorter than any existing railroad line.

This enterprise is in the hands of capitalists who are convinced of its importance, and who will spare no effort to push it to a speedy and successful conclusion. From a mere pecuniary point of view, it is considered as absolutely certain that the road will be a great success, and will be a great success, and will be a great success.

AMERICAN WINES AND BRANDIES are fast coming more and more into vogue among people of taste, who desire their own supplies at prices much below those imported. Black & Co., No. 115 Chestnut street, have secured California brandy that has not only stood the test of analysis, but is also excellent in flavor. Many of our apothecaries have secured supplies of it on account of its purity. Among the most popular of the California brandies are the "Doble Brandy," made from a mixture of the Catawba and the Delaware grapes, and named the "Doble Brandy."
